The Room in Which the Plot of Har per's Ferry Insurrection Was Planned.

A Red Brick House in Chatham Where in All Probability, "His Soul is Marching On."

[Detroit Free Press.]

Excursionists from Detroit are well ac quainted with Chatham. King street is at never befere appeared in print. all times a busy thoroughfare, and with it Detroiters are most familiar. If the visitor were to take this street and walk eastward he would come to a part of the town inhabsee neat and often handsome residences, and a school house for colored children, that would do honor to any city. Nearly opposite this school house is a two-story red-brick dwelling of quaint, old-fashioned build, whose length is just about the same as its height. The gables are bricked up the head of the stairs and called down: higher than the roof, and a broad chimr.ey occupies each end. The side is toward the road, and the five front windows are broad and rather low, while the paneling and moldings on the white door are unique and

In this house were held secret meetings that doubtless hastened, if they did not bring on, the American Civil War.

The house is owned by J. Holden, probably the best known man in Chatham, and a gentleman whose face is familiar in Detroit. Mr. Holden is a Louisiana creole, and has lived in Chatham about twenty-five years. He has a fund of historical reminiscences, and when I told kim the particular period to which I wisked to direct his attention, he very cheerfully gave me every fa-cility for writing this article. I acception this because, under the circumstances, most people would not have been so affable, as Mr. Holden cas lest $15,000 by the burning of his City Mills only a few days

As we walked up King street to his residence he related the hitherte unwritten incidents that preceded Marper's Ferry insurrection.

Stories About Lincoln.

[L. J. Cist.] In 1832, when twenty-three years old. Linsoln was induced by his friends to run as a Whig candidate for the Legislature, and made his maiden speech as follows: "Gentlemen, fellow-citizens-I presume you all I am humble know who I am. That peasant girl next to her is a hopeless epileptic. That other child is an idiet." Indeed, there was no need for information in the last case. for idiocy was stamped on every line and feature of her poor little face. Idiots or not, they danced with a will, caring not one jor for our intrusion. After the polka came a quadrille, and then again a polka, which seemed to be the favorite dance. Presently M. Lebas made a sign, and the whole company marched past us two and two in procession. There were pierrots and pages, milkmaids and columbines, Jack tars and Italian peasant girls, queens and court fools. On reaching our seats each couple gave us a polite salute, bowed to the Here and there we came upon a knot of the asylum warders, who eyed us sharply as we passed, fancying, perhaps, we belonged to the masqueraders and were trying to escape. An Eccentric Caller.

[Washington Star.] There was a very odd and very amusing character at the White House yesterday. He was a colored man, about sixty years old, short in figure, but in good proportions as to the belt. His hair and whiskers were gray. He was "Chief Justice John Marshall. as he announced Virginia," himself. He wore his pants in his boots. The latter were brightly burnished to their very tops. In his vest pocket was one of the big silver watches (or "turnips" as they called them) of the olden days. Around his neck and attached to the watch was an immense brass cable. Attached to it were numerous brass rings. There was one huge seal ring among them, the component parts of the seal being sealing wax and nothing more. This, he said, was one of the Calhoun relics. He wore a plug hat. The nap from it had gone half way from the crown. He was not poverty stricken. Upon his face was the fat smile of bacon and corn bread in abundance. On his breast was an immense badge, which said: 'Chief Justice John Marshall, of Virginia, regular porter for all steamboats and railroads." He attracted a great deal of attention, and he seemed to be satisfied. Martinsburg, Va., he said was his home. He had just come down to pay his respects to President Garfield, and scorned the hint that he might want an office. He had raised a family of ten children, the youngest of which "could lick the salt off" of your head." he said to the Star reporter. He was in pretty good circumstances; had plenty to eat, and a good home to sleep in. The Chief Justice saw the President, and shook hands with him, with all the courtly grace of his old master, whose name he mentioned with great respect. His burnished boots trod down the asphalt walk on the way to the Baltimore Depot to return home, having fulfilled what he thought to

ARREST OFFICES,

The good and staunch old stand-by, MEXICAN MUS-TANG LINIMENT, has done more to assuage pain, relieve suffering, and save the lives of men and beasts than all other liniments put together. Why? Because the Mustang penetrates through skin and flesh to the very bone, driving out all pain and soreness and morbid secretions, and restoring the afflicted part to sound and supple health.

Simon Yandes vs. Samuel C. Hanna et al.

Be it known, that on the 16th day of April. 1881, the above named plaintiff, by his attorneys, filed in the office of the Clerk of the Superior Court of Marion County, in the State of Indiana, his complaint against the above named defendant et al., and the said plaintiff, having also, on April 16, 1881, filed in said Clerk's office the affidavit of himself, showing that the piaces of residence of PRILADELPHIA, May 2.—Flour—Dull; western extra for export, $3.85; Minnesota extra, $5.25:36: Ohio do., $5.50:36; Ohio new process, $6.50. OLD HICKERY CEMENT. THE BEST AND STRONGEST ON EARTH.

Possesses the most extraordinary property of uniting itself to everything it comes in contact with, setting clear as crystal, stronger than glass, and tough as leather, in a very short time, thereby proving itself to be the test Cement for broken articles of every description. Its application is easy, simple and cleanly; coloriess in appearance, (quite transparent,) SETS AT ONCE, and is hard for ever. It remists Heat and Cold. Fire and Water, Acids and Spirits, and that hitherto weak point of all Cements, the stransparent, It is not to be inferred that a joint made with any cement will stand boiling in water, yet this may be washed and cleaned in the ordinary way with perfect safety. We want an agent in recey form in the United States. The price of Old Hickney Cement is 25cts, but we make this special offer to the readers of this paper, to send One Sample Bottle and full instructions Post Paid in U.S. for 15 cents, or 8 two cent stamps as illustrated catalogue of 1030 Fast Selling Novelties FREE.
